

CHAPTER 1

Review

1.1 In your own words, what are the differences between product testing and material testing?

Product testing includes: (a) The goal of the test procedure is different. Material testing is designed to determine the difference of a component under conditions that involve mechanical stress, mechanical loading or chemical or electrical or another (mechanical) mechanical properties that are independent of the material it is. In the product testing or different product testing there are the material or the design or both in it and the result is the result of the test procedure. Material testing tests individual specimens always designed to systematically determine one or more properties of the material with the integral material property.

1.2 What are the shortcomings, differences between material, product, and process?

Material is material with dimensions that is fully available when the applied load is removed (even if it takes time to return). Material is processed design change without considering more or less fixed costs. Material inherently involves breaking of bonds and the creation of new surfaces. Different kinds of stress or strain or other parameters like plastic deformation, but the measurement of mechanical properties of the material.

1.3 What are the differences between engineering stress, true stress, engineering strain, and true strain for loading along a single axis.

$$\sigma_{eng} = \text{engineering stress} = \frac{\text{load}}{\text{initial cross-sectional area}} = \frac{F}{A_0} \quad (1-1a)$$

$$\sigma_{true} = \text{true stress} = \frac{\text{load}}{\text{instantaneous cross-sectional area}} = \frac{F}{A} \quad (1-2a)$$

$$\epsilon_{true} = \text{true strain} = \ln \frac{\text{final length}}{\text{initial length}} = \ln \frac{l_1}{l_0} \quad (1-2b)$$

1.4 Under what conditions in Eq. 1-1 valid? What makes it no longer valid if these conditions are not met?

Equation 1-1 is valid only for engineering stress-strain relationship for a single axis tensile test loading of uniaxial component, which means uniaxial is constant for all the mechanical tests applied. And other dependencies (variation of the test region that presented in Section 1.1 or 1.2 of the 1999) that make it no longer valid. Copyright © Rietveld, B. Veen, J. Buitendijk, 1999.
