

Background

When a chemical substance enters a living organism, it can cause adverse effects. The effects can be direct or indirect, depending on the route of exposure.

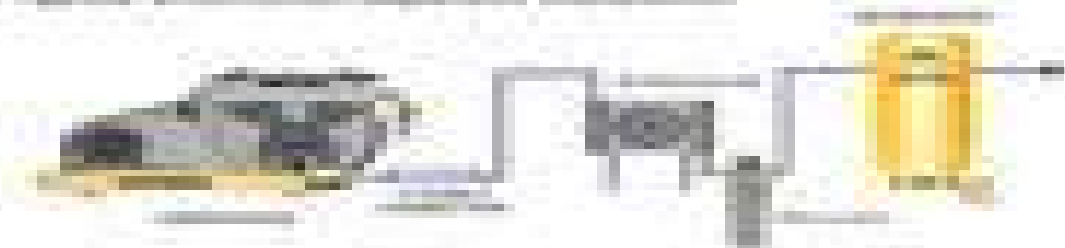

The effects can be acute or chronic, depending on the duration of exposure. Acute effects are those that occur shortly after exposure, while chronic effects are those that occur after a long period of exposure.

Objectives

The objective of this study was to determine the effects of a chemical substance on the health of a group of people. The study was conducted in a community where the substance was known to be present in the environment.

The study was designed to be a case-control study. The cases were people who had developed a health problem, and the controls were people who had not. The study was conducted over a period of 10 years.
