

RESEARCH Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry 2000;39:1033-1040.

OBJECTIVE: To examine the effects of a 12-week, 10-session, manualized, group-based, parent training program on the parenting behavior of parents of children with conduct problems.

DESIGN: Randomized controlled trial.

SETTING: Child mental health services in a large inner city.

These improvements were maintained at follow-up.

CONCLUSIONS: The parent training program was effective in improving parents' knowledge, understanding, and use of effective parenting strategies. These improvements were maintained at follow-up.

KEY WORDS: Parent training, conduct problems, parenting behavior.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, the 12-minute walk test, and the 400-meter walk test. The walking program also significantly improved the subjects' psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory, the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory, and the Visual Analog Scale. The walking program had no significant effect on the subjects' weight, blood pressure, or cholesterol levels. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
