

Introduction

Many Chinese have been living all their lives in the cities and they have never seen the countryside. In this unit, we will learn about the countryside and the people who live there. We will also learn about the different types of farms and the different types of crops that are grown there.

When we think of the countryside, we often think of fields and trees. But there is much more to it than that. There are many different types of farms and the people who live there have different ways of life. Some people live on small farms and grow their own food. Others live on large farms and work for the owner. There are also people who live in the countryside but who do not work on a farm. They may be teachers, doctors, or other professionals. The countryside is a very important part of our lives and we should learn more about it.

Section 1

My uncle lives near the city. He has a big farm. There are many trees and flowers. He has a big house. He has a big garden. He has a big pond. He has a big field. He has a big road. He has a big river. He has a big lake. He has a big mountain. He has a big valley. He has a big plain. He has a big desert. He has a big forest. He has a big city. He has a big country. He has a big world.
