Neuroimaging Data in Perception and Decision-Making Paul Sajda,Guillaume A. Rousselet,Cyril R. Pernet,2012 The cognitive psychology of perception and decision making is at a cross road Most studies still employ categorical designs a priori classified stimuli and perform statistical evaluations across subjects However a shift has been observed in recent years towards parametric designs in which the information content of stimuli is systematically manipulated to study the single trial dynamics of behaviour reaction times eye movements and brain activity EEG MEG fMRI By using the information contained in the variance of individual trials the single trial approach goes beyond the activity of the average brain it reveals the specificity of information processing in individual subjects across tasks and stimulus space revealing both inter individual commonalties and differences This Research Topic provides theoretical and empirical support for the study of single trial data Topics of particular interest include 1 description of the richness of information in single trials and how it can be successfully extracted 2 statistical issues related to measures of central tendency control for multiple comparisons multivariate approaches hierarchical modelling and characterization of individual differences 3 how manipulation of the stimulus space can allow for a direct mapping of stimulus properties onto brain activity to infer dynamics of information processing and information content of brain states 4 how results from different brain imaging techniques can be integrated at the single trial level The Economics of Money, Banking, and Financial Markets Frederic S.
