Gupta, 2005-05-23 World population is increasing at an alarming rate and this has resulted in increasing tremendously the demand for tree products such as wood for construction materials fuel and paper fruits oils and medicines etc This has put immense pressure on the world's supplies of trees and raw material to industry and will continue to do so as long as human population continues to grow Also the quality of human diet especially nutritional components is adversely affected due to limited genetic improvement of most of fruit trees Thus there is an immediate need to increase productivity of trees Improvement has been made through conventional breeding methods however conventional breeding is very slow due to long life cycle of trees A basic strategy in tree improvement is to capture genetic gain through clonal propagation Clonal propagation via organogenesis is being used for the production of selected elite individual trees However the methods are labour intensive costly and produce low volumes Genetic gain can now be captured through somatic embryogenesis Formation of embryos from somatic cells by a process resembling zygotic embryogenesis is one of the most important features of plants In 1958 Reinert in Germany and Steward in USA independently reported somatic embryogenesis in carrot cultures Since then tremendous progress in somatic embryogenesis of woody and non woody plants has taken place It offers a potentially large scale propagation system for superior clones

The Atmospheric Effects of Stratospheric Aircraft Project

Panel on Atmospheric Effects of Aviation,Commission on Geosciences, Environment and Resources,Division on Earth and Life Studies,National Research Council,1998-09-04 Scientists and policy makers alike are concerned that operation of a fleet of high speed civil transport HSCT aircraft could significantly affect the global atmosphere HSCT emissions may have a direct effect on the chemistry of the atmosphere leading to changes in the distribution of ozone they may also have indirect effects on ozone and on global climate through coupling with radiative and dynamical processes in the atmosphere An assessment of the atmospheric impact of a fleet of HSCTs thus requires not only an understanding of the chemistry of the natural stratosphere and its possible perturbations by HSCT emissions but also an understanding of the pathways for transport of HSCT emissions within the atmosphere and the resulting temporal and spatial distribution of HSCT emissions. The results of NASA's Atmospheric Effects of Stratospheric Aircraft (AESA) project were summarized in a 1995 NASA assessment. The present report looks at that summary and at more recent work to evaluate the state of the science. AESA has made good progress in the past few years. Satellite and aircraft observations have elucidated important aspects of large scale transport processes. Field campaigns have provided a much better picture of the relative importance below 20 km altitude of the major catalytic cycles for ozone destruction. Careful intercomparisons of assessment models have led to reduction of some of the differences among the models. However a number of uncertainties and inconsistencies still remain.
