

Manual Gear Extension

Manual Gear Extension Handles:

If "A" system hydraulics is inoperative, the landing gear may still be extended via the manual extension system. The manual gear extension handles are located in the flight deck floor, aft and to the left of the First Officer's seat. When the extension handles are pulled to their limit, the respective gear will release from its locked position. Gravity and air loads will assist the gear in free-falling to the down and locked position. The main gear manual extension handles need to be pulled out approximately 14 to 16 inches (35 to 40 cm) with a force of about 60 pounds. The nose gear manual extension handle needs to be pulled out approximately 8 inches (20 cm) with a force of about 80 pounds. Down and locked verification can be made using the green landing gear indicator lights.

Note: LANDING GEAR lever must be in DN or OFF position to prevent hydraulic lockup during manual extension.
