Unit 3, Lesson 3: Digital Lesson - Theory of Plate Tectonics

Objectives to learn about the historical development of a theory that helps us understand our ever-changing planet

Topics: continental drift, theory, plate tectonics, magnetic reversal, surface spreading, subduction, convection current

Slide 1: On August _____, Krakatau erupted so violently that it practically destroyed itself.

Slide 4: In the early 1900s, a scientist named Alfred _____ proposed a hypothesis called continental drift. This says that continents have not always been where they are today, but have "_____ " to their present locations over time.
Mountains that are very similar to each other appear on different _____.
Matching _____ layers of the same age and type are found in Africa and S. America.
Scientists found similar plant and animal _____ on different continents.
Coal suggests that Antarctica was once closer to the equator and had a tropical _____.
Glaciers in other evidence show that glaciers existed in many places that are now much warmer.

Slide 5: Wegener hypothesized that the present-day continents were once joined together in a single supercontinent that he called _____. About _____ million years ago, it began to break apart. The first suggested that Pangaea first broke apart into two continents, _____ and _____.
The _____ movement of the continents continues today.

Slide 6: What's the evidence for continental drift?

---

---

Slide 7: The hypothesis of continental drift eventually led to the theory of plate _____.
This theory explains that Earth's surface is made up of giant moving slabs called _____ plates.
Because _____ and _____, causes the material within the asthenosphere to move and slowly flow.
The asthenosphere flows in circular patterns, these are called _____.
Tectonic plates are giant slabs of _____. They ride on top of the asthenosphere.
The movement of the asthenosphere causes the plates above to move.
