Reconceptualizing Securitization in Afghanistan Arif Sahar, Christian Kaunert, 2024-12-09 This book analyses the securitization of ethnic identities and social groups by the state in Afghanistan in the post 2001 context Securitization is arguably the most successful theoretical framework to analyse security beyond the military confines Yet despite its broadening agenda the securitization framework has been accused of a Western bias This book analyses the extent and the modalities and practices of the securitization of ethnic identities and social groups e g women by the state in Afghanistan post 2001 which is especially relevant following the takeover by the Taliban in August 2021 It puts forward a more nuanced argument by analytically distinguishing and empirically testing state policies practices and perspectives on ethnic and social groups that are largely informed by the fear and legacies of civil war 1978 2001 The work argues that the traditional lack of a stable state identity that could function as a basis for ontological security in Afghanistan has resulted in a persistent state of fragility exacerbated by the legacies and fears of civil war that have had a direct impact on the development of the state's perspectives on ethnic and social groups Whilst the state does not necessarily indulge in explicit securitization practices and discourses securitization often takes place through implicit activities to undermine ethnic and social groups ability to enter political economic and socio cultural competitions fairly and equitably which would in turn enable these groups to challenge the state The securitization process therefore has had an impact on the ability of these groups to benefit from opportunities fairly and equitably This book will be of much interest to students of critical security studies statebuilding Asian politics and International Relations in general

Sites Unseen Scott Frickel, James R. Elliott, 2018-07-03 Winner of the 2020 Robert E Park Award for Best Book from the Community and Urban Sociology Section of the American Sociological Association From a dive bar in New Orleans to a leafy residential street in Minneapolis many establishments and homes in cities across the nation share a troubling and largely invisible past they were once sites of industrial manufacturers such as plastics factories or machine shops that likely left behind carcinogens and other hazardous industrial byproducts In Sites Unseen sociologists Scott Frickel and James Elliott uncover the hidden histories of these sites to show how they are regularly produced and reincorporated into urban landscapes with limited or no regulatory oversight By revealing this legacy of our industrial past Sites Unseen spotlights how city making has become an ongoing process of social and environmental transformation and risk containment To demonstrate these dynamics Frickel and Elliott investigate four very different cities New Orleans Minneapolis Philadelphia and Portland Oregon Using original data assembled and mapped for thousands of former manufacturers locations dating back to the 1950s they find that more than 90 percent of such sites have now been converted to urban amenities such as parks homes and storefronts with almost no environmental review And because manufacturers tend to open plants on new non industrial lots rather than on lots previously occupied by other manufacturers associated hazards continue to spread relatively unabated As they do residential turnover driven by gentrification and the rising costs of urban living further obscure these sites from residents and regulatory agencies alike Frickel and Elliott show that these hidden processes have serious consequences for city dwellers While minority and working class neighborhoods are still more likely to attract hazardous manufacturers rapid turnover in cities means that whites and middle income groups also face increased risk Since government agencies prioritize managing polluted sites that are highly visible or politically expedient many former manufacturing sites that now have other uses remain invisible To address these oversights the authors advocate creating new municipal databases that identify previously undocumented manufacturing sites as potential environmental hazards They also suggest that legislation limiting urban sprawl might reduce the flow of hazardous materials beyond certain boundaries A wide ranging synthesis of urban and environmental scholarship Sites Unseen shows that creating sustainable cities requires deep engagement with industrial history as well as with the social and regulatory processes that continue to remake urban areas through time A Volume in the American Sociological Association's Rose Series in Sociology Inclusive Transport Hans Jeekel, 2018-10-29 Inclusive Transport Fighting Involuntary Transport Disadvantages offers readers profound and multifaceted insights into transportation and social equity guiding transportation and urban studies researchers planners and policy makers in evaluating potential solutions to this complex issue It considers discrimination and its societal consequences providing a needed perspective on who is left out of transportation planning and why The book is systematically divided into 2 parts Part A is problem oriented and explores the main problems to the transportation disadvantaged accessibility and affordability It looks at the consequences of non accessibility the problems non car owners face and the interplay between housing and transportation Part B is policy oriented and analyses how current policies tend to forget transport disadvantages It looks at pragmatic solutions for transport disadvantaged and ends with a design for inclusive transport being a more radical approach combining sustainability challenges people's behaviours and emotions creating more just and equitable mobility Synthesizes academic research and narratives on transport disadvantage and the transport disadvantaged linking the research with current mobility policies and practices Connects the fight on transport disadvantages with sustainable and smart mobility strategies and looks into car sharing ride sharing and individualising public transport while de individualizing car use Has an extensive usage of data figures and examples from around the world and inspiring mobility plans and policies
