Reconstructing Human Rights Joe Hoover, 2016-06-02 We live in a human rights world The language of human rights claims and numerous human rights institutions shape almost all aspects of our political lives yet we struggle to know how to judge this development Scholars give us good reason to be both supportive and sceptical of the universal claims that human rights enable alternatively suggesting that they are pillars of cross cultural understanding of justice or the ideological justification of a violent and exclusionary global order All too often however our evaluations of our human rights world are not based on sustained consideration of their complex ambiguous and often contradictory consequences Reconstructing Human Rights argues that human rights are only as good as the ends they help us realise We must attend to what ethical principles actually do in the world to know their value So for human rights we need to consider how the identity of humanity and the concept of rights shape our thinking structure our political activity and contribute to social change Reconstructing Human Rights defends human rights as a tool that should enable us to challenge political authority and established constellations of political membership by making new claims possible Human rights mobilise the identity of humanity to make demands upon the terms of legitimate authority and challenges established political memberships In this work it is argued that this tool should be guided by a democratising ethos in pursuit of that enables claims for more democratic forms of politics and more inclusive political communities While this work directly engages with debates about human rights in philosophy and political theory in connecting our evaluations of the value of human rights to their worldly consequences it will also be of interest to scholars considering human rights across disciplines including Law Sociology and Anthropology

Wiseman, 2021-03-31 By drawing on quantitative data and qualitative analyses of five major national education policies implemented in India over the last 15 years this comprehensive volume explores their impact on teacher quality and perceived effectiveness explaining how this relates to variations in student performance Responding to a national agenda to increase the quality of the Indian teacher workforce Teacher Quality and Education Policy in India critically questions the application of human capital theory to Indian education policy Chapters provide in depth and strategically structured analyses of five national policies including the recently approved National Education Policy NEP 2020 to see how Indian policymakers use teacher quality as a driver and measurement of education and national economic development Ultimately the text offers evidence based policy recommendations to improve teacher quality in India suggesting that while all five policies have contributed significant
