THEORY

Light can be considered as a beam, or ray, that travels in straight lines (the case of non-linear propagation) unless acted by reflection or refraction. When a light ray travelling in one medium hits the interface between a different medium, part of it is reflected back into the same medium (according to the law of reflection) and the other part is refracted (part of the light will enter the medium, and the direction will change). This process is called as reflection, and part of reflection follows the law of reflection.

Law of Reflection (It can be figure 1), showing that when a light ray strikes any mirror, the angle of incidence i , is equal to the angle of reflection. In both angles measured from the normal to the surface of the mirror. This is true for flat as well as curved surfaces (convex surface which bulge outward called convex, and those that bulge inwardly called concave). If the surface is spherical, or circular, then the reflecting ray will always be in one plane (surface normal) or along with reflecting surface.

(It is figure 1, the red line shows light ray, the black line shows the normal)
