The only range of wine-making equipment in the world that's designed for the home

Harvest grapes

The vintage (harvest) starts in late August and it's done by hand or machine. Generally speaking, red wine grapes are harvested in the autumn from white wine grapes.

Prepare grapes

Grapes are washed and destemmed. Some wineries ferment whole clusters to add flavour. The result is a 'whole' style wine with more body. Most winemakers will hull the grapes, leaving them to be used as seedlings.

Clarification

Clarifying or 'fining' agents such as egg whites or vegetable protein are added to the wine. These help to remove any remaining solids. Some wines are left to clarify naturally.

Press

After the fermentation process, the juice is pressed out of the skins and seeds. The juice is then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.

Fermentation

Grapes are left to ferment in the barrel for a few days. The juice is then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.

Add yeast

Yeast is added to the juice and the wine is left to ferment. The yeast will convert the sugar in the juice into alcohol. The wine is then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.

Bottling

Bottling is done with care to ensure the wine is not oxidized. The bottles are then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.

Malolactic

As wine settles in barrels or bottles, it is left to ferment. The yeast will convert the sugar in the juice into alcohol. The wine is then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.

Aging

The wine is left to age in barrels or bottles for a few years. The wine is then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.

Blending

Bottle aging

The wine is left to age in barrels or bottles for a few years. The wine is then left to settle for a few days before being bottled.
