Faith in Nation Anthony W. Marx, 2005-04-21 Common wisdom has long held that the ascent of the modern nation coincided with the flowering of Enlightenment democracy and the decline of religion ringing in an age of tolerant inclusive liberal states Not so demonstrates Anthony W Marx in this landmark work of revisionist political history and analysis In a startling departure from a historical consensus that has dominated views of nationalism for the past quarter century Marx argues that European nationalism emerged two centuries earlier in the early modern era as a form of mass political engagement based on religious conflict intolerance and exclusion Challenging the self congratulatory genealogy of civic Western nationalism Marx shows how state builders attempted to create a sense of national solidarity to support their burgeoning authority Key to this process was the transfer of power from local to central rulers the most suitable vehicle for effecting this transfer was religion and fanatical passions Religious intolerance specifically the exclusion of religious minorities from the nascent state provided the glue that bonded the remaining populations together Out of this often violent religious intolerance grew popular nationalist sentiment Only after a core and exclusive nationality was formed in England and France and less successfully in Spain did these countries move into the enlightened 19th century all the while continuing to export intolerance and exclusion to overseas colonies Providing an explicitly political theory of early nation building rather than an account emphasizing economic imperatives or literary imaginings Marx reveals that liberal secular Western political traditions were founded on the basis of illiberal intolerant origins His provocative account also suggests that present day exclusive and violent nation building or efforts to form solidarity through cultural or religious antagonisms are not fundamentally different from the West's own earlier experiences
