Role of Congress

Decision Influences

Personal Motives	Representative's Influence	Interest Groups	Political Party Loyalty
Members sometimes follow their personal beliefs even when these beliefs go against the wishes of the voters back home or the interest of the public.	- Influenced by the people who live in one district, state or territory. - The ability to decide how whether members of Congress should represent local interests over general national interest.	- Interest groups provide information on issues, suggest legislation or amendments and pressure legislators. - Members of key groups contribute to members' campaign finance. - Members who also work for interest groups receive campaign contributions.	- Members feel increased party loyalty when strong party leaders in Congress are in leadership office. - Party loyalty leads to stronger party support of the party's political beliefs and values.

Role of Congress

Representatives - the members of the U.S. House of Representatives
Senate - made up of 100 members, 2 from each state and 2 from the District of Columbia

Making Laws

- Congress is responsible for making the nation's laws.

Expenditures made by Congressmen can be using if...

- The amount reflects the member's personal beliefs.
- Interest groups who support the legislation contribute a lot of money to the campaign fund.
- The leadership of the member's political party supports the legislation.

House and Members of Congress

The House of Representatives is made up of 435 members. Each state is guaranteed at least one representative, and the number of representatives for each state is based on the state's population.

Terms of Representatives

Each year of the House of Representatives is called a Congress. Each Congress is divided into two sessions. The first session starts in January, and the second session starts in July.

For 1789, the House had just 59 members. After the 1790 census, the number of seats was raised to 105. By 1850, the number of seats was raised to 267. By 1911, the number of seats was raised to 435.

To represent the House, each state is given a certain number of representatives. The number of representatives for each state is based on the state's population.

Senators

- Representatives serve two-year terms.
- If a representative does not finish his or her term, the governor of the representative's state must call a special election to fill the seat.
