10. Explain the importance of the following factors in the design of a control system:
- 10.1 Stability: A system is stable if its output remains bounded for all bounded inputs. Stability is a fundamental requirement for any control system.
 - 10.2 Transient Response: The transient response is the system's behavior during the initial period after a disturbance. It is characterized by the rise time, settling time, and overshoot.
 - 10.3 Steady-State Error: The steady-state error is the difference between the desired output and the actual output after the system has reached equilibrium.
 - 10.4 Bandwidth: The bandwidth is the range of frequencies over which the system can operate effectively.
 - 10.5 Robustness: A robust system is able to maintain its performance in the presence of uncertainties and disturbances.

- Other studies have shown that the use of a computer-based system for data collection and analysis can reduce the time and cost of data collection and analysis. This is because the system can be used to collect data from a large number of subjects, and the data can be analyzed using a computer program. This can be done in a much shorter time than if the data were collected and analyzed manually.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (IG) participated in a 12-week training program, while the control group (CG) remained sedentary. The IG showed significant improvements in physical fitness and HRQL compared to the CG. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary, middle-aged women.

1. The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is that the company is not meeting its sales targets. The second step is to analyze the data. The third step is to develop a plan. The fourth step is to implement the plan. The fifth step is to evaluate the results.

1. Identifying the problem (e.g. a new, unexplained, recurrent haematuria in a 55-year-old male) (The following 4 steps are important in the early diagnostic process)
 2. History (e.g. previous urinary tract infection, haematuria, smoking, alcohol intake, occupational exposure)
 3. Examination (e.g. blood pressure, weight, height, general appearance)
 4. Investigation (e.g. urine, blood, imaging, histology)

Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was plotted against the number of trials for each condition. The number of correct responses increased with the number of trials for all conditions. The number of correct responses was highest for the condition with the highest number of trials (10 trials) and lowest for the condition with the lowest number of trials (2 trials).
