Gothic Elements In Jane Eyre

This essay sample essay on Gothic Elements In Jane Eyre offers an extensive list of facts and arguments related to it. The essay's introduction, body paragraphs and the conclusion are provided below.

I believe that the gothic novel tradition has indeed influenced the novel that is Jane Eyre. Most gothic novels contain supernatural encounters, remote locations, complicated family childhood, ancient monad homes, dark secrets, suspense and a successful conclusion. The story contains the majority of these elements. The romantic section in the novel has a fairytale theme; this is quite common if the story is to follow the gothic tradition. We meet the Byronic hero "Mr Rochester" and therefore we expect a damsel in distress but Jane never presents herself in this manner.

In fact, it is she who rescues "Mr Rochester" and Jane becomes the heroin. "He laid a heavy hand on my shoulder and leaning on me with some stress, limped on to his horse. Soon afterwards, Mr Rochester and Jane fall deeply in love with one another, but due to the gothic tradition, there must be someone or something that must block Jane from achieving true happiness. According to the gothic tradition, good will overcome evil. We are not sure what evil Jane will have to overcome but it appears in the form of Bertha. Bertha is indeed a true gothic character.

Why Is Jane Eyre Gothic

The only place in Thornfield where Jane is forbidden to explore is the third floor of the mansion. This gives suspense and curiosity to find out what or who is in the third floor. At first, it seems that the servant Grace Poole is this person but soon afterwards, it is Bertha. The gytrash is in fact Mr. Rochester dog in the novel. This great northern -english loyal companion gives a supernatural theme. "It was exactly one form of Bessie's Gytrash" The moon plays a key role in the whole novel as it is thought of as a mystical, magical creation and it seems to always appear when a chapter is about to open in Jane's life.

Before leaving Thornfield in order to seek a good education at Lowood, the moon appears. "The moon was set, and it was very dark." The moon gives a very gothic symbol to the story. In the majority of Victorian, gothic novels there are usually frequent murder attempts on either the main character(s) or a meaningful person that gives hope and joy to the main character. In the novel the murder, attempts are on Jane. "My wedding dress and veil stood open, "Sophie?" I cried. A form emerged from the closet: it took the light and observed my garments"; and then my blood crept cold through my veins.

Mr Rochester, this was neither Sophie nor Leah, it was not Mrs Fairfax: it was not even that strange girl Grace Poole. "It was a great woman with long brown hair and I shivered just looking at her." The pair, Mr Rochester and Jane continue this conversation on how this strange woman had a dagger and how frightful her face
