Learn The History Education Of History:

Why Learn History (When It's Already on Your Phone) Sam Wineburg, 2018-09-17 A look at how to teach history in the age of easily accessible but not always reliable information Let's start with two truths about our era that are so inescapable as to have become clichés We are surrounded by more readily available information than ever before And a huge percent of it is inaccurate Some of the bad info is well meaning but ignorant Some of it is deliberately deceptive All of it is pernicious With the Internet at our fingertips what's a teacher of history to do In Why Learn History When It's Already on Your Phone professor Sam Wineburg has the answers beginning with this We can't stick to the same old read the chapter answer the question snoozefest If we want to educate citizens who can separate fact from fake we have to equip them with new tools Historical thinking Wineburg shows has nothing to do with the ability to memorize facts Instead it's an orientation to the world that cultivates reasoned skepticism and counters our tendency to confirm our biases Wineburg lays out a mine filled landscape but one that with care attention and awareness we can learn to navigate The future of the past may rest on our screens But its fate rests in our hands Praise for Why Learn History When It's Already on Your Phone If every K 12 teacher of history and social studies read just three chapters of this book Crazy for History Changing History One Classroom at a Time and Why Google Can't Save Us the ensuing transformation of our populace would save our democracy James W Lowen author of Lies My Teacher Told Me and Teaching What Really Happened A sobering and urgent report from the leading expert on how American history is taught in the nation's schools A bracing edifying and vital book Jill Lepore New Yorker staff writer and author of These Truths Wineburg is a true innovator who has thought more deeply about the relevance of history to the Internet and vice versa than any other scholar I know Anyone interested in the uses and abuses of history today has a duty to read this book Niall Ferguson senior fellow Hoover Institution and author of The Ascent of Money and Civilization

History Education and Historical Inquiry Bob Bain, Arthur Chapman, Alison Kitson, Tamara Shreiner, 2024-04-01 Inquiry plays a vital role in history as a discipline which constructs knowledge about the past and it is a vital organizing principle in history education in many countries around the world Inquiry is also much debated however and although it has prominent contemporary advocates around the world it also has prominent critics in education studies This volume in the International Review of History Education explores the role of historical inquiry in history curricula and in history classrooms and addresses a series of linked questions including the following What does historical inquiry mean in history classrooms What forms does classroom based historical inquiry take and to what extent is it understood in differing ways in different contexts What do we know about the affordances and constraints associated with inquiry based learning in history what is the evidence of the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of inquiry based historical learning We address these questions in the volume by presenting seventeen papers from eight different international contexts exploring historical inquiry that will be of interest both to history teachers curriculum designers and history education researchers seven papers from England three from the US two from Sweden and one each from Argentina Australia Belgium Canada and Singapore The volume adds to our knowledge about teachers thinking about inquiry and teachers inquiry practices It adds to our knowledge about the impact and value of inquiry in developing children s historical learning It also explores the challenges that implementing inquiry can present for history teachers and provides support for implementation and examples of successful practice

ENDORSEMENT A wonderful overview of the global story of historical inquiry Canvassing everything from finding opportunities to teach history through all levels of education through to the complexities of navigating different views on the past inside and outside of the classroom History Education and Historical Inquiry provides a practical and empowering approach for educators around the world Recommended reading for anyone who wants to feel the support of educators from around the world in strengthening the place of inquiry in complex times Marnie Hughes Warrington University of South Australia

Teaching History at University Alan Booth,Jeremy Black,2003 Drawing on a wide range of international research reflections and experiences of university historians this book links theory and practice and examines how high quality history teaching and learning can be achieved today in universities world wide

In Search of America's Past Bruce VanSledright,2002-04-12 Offers alternatives to conventional textbook learning for history students describing the use of in depth historical projects and investigations that result in better retention of knowledge

Learn the History Peter Richardson,2015-01-06 As parents we are in the best position to encourage our children s natural interest in history It is to us they address their first historical questions Where did I come from and Was I always here These two questions contain the two main meanings of history it is the story of people and events and it is the record of times past Follow this guide

The Idea of an Historical Education Geoffrey Partington,1980 Considering questions about history schooling this book asks whether history is too hard for children whether it involves too much rote learning and whether there is too much emphasis on specific events rather than wider concepts

MasterClass in History Education Christine Counsell,Katharine Burn,Arthur Chapman,2016-10-06 MasterClass in History Education draws on international research and practice to present effective and engaging approaches for history teachers who want to explore the ways in which reading research and reflection can support the development of history teaching and learning in the classroom At the heart of the book is a series of professional enquiries carried out by experienced history teachers working in a range of contexts Each history teacher addresses clear questions arising from their practice and together they illustrate various approaches to data collection data analysis and argument These history teachers also show how they drew on diverse scholarship in history and history education including many publications by other history teachers In eight further chapters other experts ranging from practitioner scholars to researchers in diverse fields such as history history education teacher education teacher research and curriculum theory reflect on the distinctive insights that these teachers offer and explore connections with their own fields The combination of perspectives and the depth of knowledge of the varied contributors reveal the importance of different kinds of relationship between theory and practice The links between classroom realities and research and the critical use of different kinds of text will support history teachers in developing their practice and professional voice

International Review of History Education Alaric Dickinson, Peter Gordon, Peter Lee, 2013-05-13 The third volume in this international review takes raising standards as its central theme Raising standards is no simple matter either conceptually or empirically whatever politicians might think If it is to happen it must draw on research and practical experience from other countries

Teaching History for the Common Good Keith C. Barton, Linda S. Levstik, 2004-07-13 In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik present a clear overview of competing ideas among educators historians politicians and the public about the nature and purpose of teaching history and they evaluate these debates in light of current research on students historical thinking In many cases disagreements about what should be taught to the nation's children and how it should be presented reflect fundamental differences that will not easily be resolved A central premise of this book though is that systematic theory and research can play an important role in such debates by providing evidence of how students think how their ideas interact with the information they encounter both in school and out and how these ideas differ across contexts Such evidence is needed as an alternative to the untested assumptions that plague so many discussions of history education The authors review research on students historical thinking and set it in the theoretical context of mediated action an approach that calls attention to the concrete actions that people undertake the human agents responsible for such actions the cultural tools that aid and constrain them their purposes and their social contexts They explain how this theory allows educators to address the breadth of practices settings purposes and tools that influence students developing understanding of the past as well as how it provides an alternative to the academic discipline of history as a way of making decisions about teaching and learning the subject in schools Beyond simply describing the factors that influence students thinking Barton and Levstik evaluate their implications for historical understanding and civic engagement They base these evaluations not on the disciplinary study of history but on the purpose of social education preparing students for participation in a pluralist democracy Their ultimate concern is how history can help citizens engage in collaboration toward the common good In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik discuss the contribution of theory and research explain the theory of mediated action and how it guides their analysis and describe research on children's and adults' knowledge of and interest in history lay out a vision of pluralist participatory democracy and its relationship to the humanistic study of history as a basis for evaluating the perspectives on the past that influence students learning explore four principal stances toward history identification analysis moral response and exhibition review research on the extent to which children and adolescents understand and accept each of these and examine how the stances might contribute to or detract from participation in a pluralist democracy address six of the principal tools of history narrative structure stories of individual achievement and motivation national narratives inquiry empathy as perspective taking and empathy as caring and review research and conventional wisdom on teachers knowledge and practice and argue that for teachers to embrace investigative multi perspectival approaches to history they need more than knowledge of content and pedagogy they need a guiding purpose that can be fulfilled only by these approaches and preparation for participatory democracy provides such purpose Teaching History for the Common Good is essential reading for history and social studies professionals researchers teacher educators and students as well as for policymakers parents and members of the general public who are interested in history education or in students thinking and learning about the subject

The Challenge of Rethinking History Education Bruce VanSledright, 2010-09-13 In The Challenge of Rethinking History Education Bruce A VanSledright argues for a more inquiry oriented approach to history teaching and learning that fosters a sense of citizenship through the critical skills of historical investigation
