Committee looks at the administration of examinations for 15 19 year olds in England The Committee expresses serious concerns about incentives in the exam system and about competition on syllabus content Incentives in the system should be changed so the downward pressure through the competition of exam boards is mitigated The Committee considers a number of options to change incentives including i A single board This offers a simpler system with no risk of competition but the Committee believes the cost risk and disruption outweigh the benefits ii Franchising of subjects to exam boards This removes syllabus competition but again has downsides 3 Or the current system of multiple boards The Committee sees no benefit in competition on syllabus content but the setting and marking of exams and associated administration if properly regulated could generate incentives and drive quality up offering value for money to schools and colleges The Committee also recommends the development of national syllabuses accredited by Ofqual The syllabuses would be developed by exam boards in conjunction with learned bodies and employer organisations and could therefore retain the benefits of competition on quality and the incentive for exam boards to innovate

Counter-terrorism policy and human rights (seventeenth report) Great Britain: Parliament: Joint Committee on Human Rights,2010-03-25 The Joint Committee on Human Rights calls for a fundamental independent review of the necessity for and proportionality of all counter terrorism measures adopted since September 11 2001 It questions the way that the policy imperatives of national security and public safety have been used to justify squeezing out human rights considerations Since September 11 2001 the Government has continuously claimed that there is a public emergency threatening the life of the nation The Committee questions whether the country has really been in this state for over eight years A permanent state of emergency skews public debate about the justification for rights limiting counter terrorism measures It is unacceptable that the Director General of the Security Service refuses to appear before it to give public evidence despite giving public lectures and media interviews The Committee finds the Government's narrow definition of complicity in torture significant and worrying and calls for an urgent independent inquiry into the allegations of complicity in torture The Government should drop the draft bill still being held in reserve to allow pre charge detention to be extended to 42 days And more work should be done on measures such as bail and the use of intercept evidence that could reduce the use of pre charge detention The Intelligence and Security Committee should become a proper Parliamentary committee with an independent secretariat and legal advice and appointing an independent reviewer of counter terror legislation who reports directly to Parliament not the Government
