

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number and then randomly selects a name from the names placed in bowls for each group. The name that is called reads the problem, and that person then solves the problem. A new problem is then presented and the person that has read that problem randomly selects the person to read the next problem.

After the 10 problems are all completed, each is read again. The group that read the problem receives the average number of seconds it took to solve that problem. The person spending the least amount of time receives a reward, and the person spending the most time receives a punishment.

The teacher takes 1 minute per problem, spends 10 minutes each group and 10 minutes each time for the student. The time reading the problem, solving the problem and reading the answer is the student spending the time solving the problem. Each time a new problem is read, the student has 1 minute to solve the problem. The time through the problem.

Each time a group has finished and a new problem is read, the student has 1 minute to solve the problem and the teacher has 1 minute to read the problem. The student has 1 minute to solve the problem.

The teacher has a new problem at the end of each group. The teacher has 1 minute to read the problem and the student has 1 minute to solve the problem.

The teacher has 1 minute to read the problem.

The teacher has 1 minute to read the problem.
