

For many years the curriculum for medical assistant programs has been based on student achievement of specific competencies. According to the Medical Assisting Education Review Board (MAERB):

Medical assistants graduating from programs accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Allied Health Education Programs (CAAHEP) will demonstrate critical thinking based on knowledge of academic subject matter required for competence in the profession. They will incorporate the cognitive knowledge in performance of the psychomotor and affective domains in their practice as medical assistants in providing patient care.

The Accrediting Bureau of Health Education Schools (ABHES) also bases its recommended curriculum on student achievement of identified competencies:

The depth and breadth of the program's curriculum enables graduates to acquire the knowledge and competencies necessary to become an entry-level professional in the medical assisting field. Competencies required for successful completion of the program are delineated, and the curriculum ensures achievement of these entry-level competencies through mastery of coursework and skill achievement. Focus is placed on credentialing requirements and opportunities to obtain employment and to increase employability.

National curriculum standards for the education of medical assistants are based on recognized competencies that employers expect entry-level medical assistants to have. The 2015 Core Curriculum for Medical Assistants established by the MAERB must be followed for programs accredited by CAAHEP. Those completing a CAAHEP-accredited program must demonstrate core entry-level competencies in knowledge of subject matter, be able to perform the psychomotor skills needed in an ambulatory care center, and have appropriate behavioral competencies to respond professionally and with empathy toward patients and their families. The 12 academic subjects in a CAAHEP-approved curriculum are as follows:

- I. Anatomy and Physiology
- II. Applied Mathematics
- III. Infection Control
- IV. Nutrition
- V. Concepts of Effective Communication
- VI. Administrative Functions
- VII. Basic Practice Finances
- VIII. Third Party Reimbursement
- IX. Procedural and Diagnostic Coding
- X. Legal Implications
- XI. Ethical Considerations
- XII. Protective Practices

ABHES also offers accreditation for medical assisting programs. The organization focuses its curriculum requirements on student competency achievement with 11 required areas of study:

1. General Orientation [to the field of medical assisting]
2. Anatomy and Physiology
3. Medical Terminology
4. Medical Law and Ethics
5. Psychology of Human Relations
6. Pharmacology
7. Records Management
8. Administrative Procedures

9. Clinical Procedures
10. Medical Laboratory Procedures
11. Career Development

What does this mean for you, the medical assistant student? To meet national standards, your MA program must comply with competency-based learning in multiple areas. The most important characteristic of competency-based education is that it measures learning and skill achievement over time. Students progress through the program by demonstrating their competence, which means they prove they have mastered the knowledge, skills, and professional behaviors required to achieve competency in a particular task. For example, one of the basic skills you must achieve as a medical assistant student is taking an accurate blood pressure. Some students will have more difficulty consistently achieving this goal than others, but each student must be able to take a blood pressure accurately before he or she can move on in the curriculum.

ADULT LEARNERS AND COMPETENCY-BASED EDUCATION

Competency-based learning is ideal for adult learners who are attempting to understand new information and achieve new skills. Educators recognize that adult learners come to the classroom with different work-related experiences and educational backgrounds. Therefore, adult students have a wide range of understanding about the knowledge and skills that must be achieved in the program. Adult students also learn material at different rates. Competency-based education recognizes these qualities of adult learners and takes advantage of them. Let's go back to the blood pressure example. Perhaps you took a healthcare lab in high school, in which you learned to take blood pressures; another student may have worked in a long-term care facility, where he was responsible for monitoring vital signs throughout the day. You both may need just a review of the anatomy and physiology aspects of a patient's blood pressure. However, other students in the class will not know anything about this skill. With competency-based education, your instructor can design laboratory activities that meet all students' needs, including your own.

CRITICAL THINKING APPLICATION

1-1

Can you think of any examples of how competency-based education might help you succeed as a medical assistant student? Come up with two possibilities and share them with your classmates.

PORTFOLIOS

Have you taken a class in the past that required you to develop a portfolio? Portfolios are frequently used in an Art or English class to demonstrate student skills and learning achievements. Generally, a portfolio is a collection of student materials that demonstrates learning. An advantage of developing a portfolio for a medical assistant program is that you can decide which pieces of your work best demonstrate your learning and skill achievement over time. Why would this be beneficial to you?

In a competency-based program, you must achieve a series of skills, not only to complete the program, but also to prove to future

The World of Visual Time Signals for Mariners Roger Kinns, 2024-11-18 This book describes the worldwide evolution of land based visual time signals that were used by mariners in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries for accurate navigation at sea They followed development of chronometers which were carried in ships to show mean time at Greenwich the chosen prime meridian Greenwich time could be compared with local astronomical time to determine longitude but chronometers were mechanical devices that had to be checked for accuracy Land based signals that were regulated by astronomical observations evolved from the ideas in 1818 of Robert Wauchope a British naval officer who served at the Cape of Good Hope He inspired introduction of time balls specifically the time ball at Greenwich in 1833 which set the standard for subsequent installations and is still in operation today The main emphasis is on the external appearance of time signals at different locations around the world and how they were used by mariners for rating chronometers Time balls and guns also became popular signals for public use and workplace control but then had social and political implications
