Methodology

The study was conducted using a qualitative approach, involving semi-structured interviews with 10 participants. The participants were selected through purposive sampling to ensure a range of perspectives on the topic.

The interviews were conducted over a period of six weeks, with each session lasting approximately 45 minutes. The data was collected through audio recordings and field notes.

The data was then analysed using thematic analysis, which involves identifying themes or patterns within the data. This process was iterative, with themes emerging as the researcher read and interpreted the data.

The results of the study are presented in the following sections, where the identified themes are discussed in detail. The findings suggest that there are several key factors influencing the outcomes of the study.

The first theme identified was the importance of communication. Participants emphasized the need for clear and effective communication between all parties involved in the study.

The second theme was the role of the researcher. Participants highlighted the importance of the researcher's position and the impact it has on the study's outcomes.

The third theme was the influence of external factors. Participants noted that various external factors, such as social and cultural norms, can significantly impact the study's results.

The fourth theme was the importance of ethical considerations. Participants stressed the need for strict adherence to ethical guidelines to ensure the integrity and validity of the study.

The fifth theme was the role of the community. Participants discussed the importance of involving the community in the study and the impact it can have on the study's outcomes.

The findings of this study have several implications for future research. First, it highlights the need for a more holistic approach to research, one that considers all relevant factors and their interactions.
