Gui Xue,Urs Maurer,Mohamed L Seghier,2015-01-22 Reading is an integral part of life in today's information driven societies Since the pioneering work of Dejerine on word blindness in brain lesioned patients the literature has increased exponentially from neuropsychological case reports to mechanistic accounts of word processing at the behavioural neurofunctional and computational levels tapping into diverse aspects of visual word processing These studies have revealed some exciting findings about visual word processing including how the brain learns to read how changes in literacy impact upon word processing strategies and whether word processing mechanisms vary across different alphabetic logographic or artificial writing systems Other studies have attempted to characterise typical and atypical word processes in special populations in order to explain why dyslexic brains struggle with words how multilingualism changes the way our brains see words and what the exact developmental signatures are that would shape the acquisition of reading skills Exciting new insights have also emerged from recent studies that have investigated word stimuli at the system network level by looking for instance at how the reading system interacts with other cognitive systems in a context dependent fashion how visual language stimuli are integrated into the speech processing streams how both left and right hemispheres cooperate and interact during word processing and what the exact contributions of subcortical and cerebellar regions to reading are The contributions to this Research Topic highlight the latest findings regarding the different issues mentioned above particularly how these findings can explain or model the different processes mechanisms pathways or cognitive strategies by which the human brain sees words The introductory editorial summarising the contributions included here highlights how varieties of behavioural tests and neuroimaging techniques can be used to investigate word processing mechanisms across different alphabetic and logographic writing systems      WHOLE Rex Miller,Bill Latham,Kevin Baird,Michelle Kinder,2020-02-25 A shocking statistic

Salomone, 2022

A sweeping account of the global rise of English and the high stakes politics of language Spoken by a quarter of the world's population English is today's lingua franca its common tongue The language of business popular media and international politics English has become commodified for its economic value and increasingly detached from any particular nation This meteoric rise of English has many obvious benefits to communication Tourists can travel abroad with greater ease Political leaders can directly engage their counterparts Researchers can collaborate with foreign colleagues Business interests can flourish in the global economy But the rise of English has very real downsides as well In Europe imperatives of political integration and job mobility compete with pride in national language and heritage In the United States and England English isolates us from the cultural and economic benefits of speaking other languages And in countries like India South Africa Morocco and Rwanda it has stratified society along lines of English proficiency In The Rise of English Rosemary Salomone offers a commanding view of the unprecedented spread of English and the far reaching effects it has on global and local politics economics media education and business From the inner workings of the European Union to linguistic battles over influence in Africa Salomone draws on a wealth of research to tell the complex story of English and ultimately to argue for English not as a force for domination but as a core component of multilingualism and the transcendence of linguistic and cultural borders Alternative Models of Addiction Hanna Pickard, Serge H. Ahmed, Bennett Foddy, 2015-12-07

For much of the 20th century theories of addictive behaviour and motivation were polarized between two models The first model viewed addiction as a moral failure for which addicts are rightly held responsible and judged accordingly The second model in contrast viewed addiction as a specific brain disease caused by neurobiological adaptations occurring in response to chronic drug or alcohol use and over which addicts have no choice or control As our capacity to observe neurobiological phenomena improved the second model became scientific orthodoxy increasingly dominating addiction research and informing public understandings of addiction More recently however a dissenting view has emerged within addiction research based partly on new scientific research and partly on progress in philosophical and psychological understandings of relevant mental phenomena This view does not revert to treating addiction as a moral failure but nonetheless holds that addictive behaviour is fundamentally motivated by choice and subject to at least a degree of voluntary control On this alternative model of addiction addictive behaviour is an instrumental means to ends that are desired by the individual although much controversy exists with respect to the rationality or irrationality of these ends the degree and nature of the voluntary control of addictive behaviour and motivation the explanation of the difference between addictive and non addictive behaviour and motivation and lastly the extent to which addictive behaviour and motivation is correctly characterised as pathological or diseased This research topic includes papers in the traditions of neuroscience psychology philosophy law and social science that explore alternative understandings of addiction
