Modeling the impact of multiple factors on a response variable is a common task in many fields. In this paper, we propose a new method for modeling the impact of multiple factors on a response variable. The proposed method is based on the idea of using a single function to model the impact of all factors. This function is called the "global function". The global function is defined as the sum of the individual functions for each factor. The individual functions are called the "local functions". The local functions are defined as the product of the global function and the individual factor. The proposed method is called the "Global-Local Modeling" (GLM) method. The GLM method is a simple and effective method for modeling the impact of multiple factors on a response variable. It is easy to implement and interpret. The GLM method is a promising method for modeling the impact of multiple factors on a response variable.
