8 Heating and ventilation system - general information

1. The heating/ventilation system consists of a ducted heater (after filter and vents) in the centre and at each end of the floor, and air ducts to the front and rear footwells.

2. The control unit is located in the base, and the controls operate flap valves to direct you may the air flowing through the various parts of the heating/ventilation system. The flap valves are controlled in the air distribution housing, which acts as a heater distribution unit, passing air to the various ducts and vents.

3. Cold air enters the space through the grille at the rear of the engine compartment. A pollen filter is fitted to the rear to filter out dust, pollen and sand from the incoming air.

4. The airflow, which can be directed by the driver, then flows through the various ducts, according to the settings of the controls. Note it is expelled through ducts at the rear of the engine. If warm air is required, the cold air is passed through the heater matrix, which is heated by the engine coolant.

10.6 Unbolt the bolts (arrowed) and remove the pollen filter cover.

5. If necessary, the coolant air supply can be prevented, allowing the air made the engine to be recirculated. This can be useful to prevent pollutants entering from outside the engine, but should only be used briefly, as the recirculation of fumes from the vehicle air can be dangerous.

6. Current models may be fitted with heated front seats. The heat is produced by electrically heated mats in the seat and connected externally (see Chapter 12). The temperature is regulated automatically by a thermostat, and can be set at one of three levels, controlled by switches on the floor.
