

FINAL-YEAR PROJECT REPORT WRITING GUIDELINES

The final year report is an important undertaking and should use the structural guidelines outlined below. Examiners are very interested in the process that was used during the final year project. The mechanism for detailing the process is the final year project report.

EXPECTED CONTENT

Title Page

This should contain the following information:

- Title,
- Full name of author,
- Degree that it contributes towards,
- Industrial or other collaboration if appropriate,
- Month and year of submission.

Note that the title page should not show a page number.

Abstract

This should be not more than one page in length. The abstract should allow the reader who is unfamiliar with the work to gain a swift and accurate impression of what the project is about, how it arose and what has been achieved.

Contents List

This should give a complete list of what the report contains starting with the abstract (the title page is not included in the contents list).

List of Tables/Figures

If the report contains figures or tables a list of these should be provided. The list should give the table or figure number, the title of the table or figure and the page number. If only a few tables and figures are present, they may be treated on one page. Remember that all figures and tables used must be referred to in the text. For example "The class diagram shown in Figure 2.1"

Acknowledgements

It is normal to thank those who have given help and support (typically your supervisor). Keep acknowledgements short and business-like.

Introduction/Background

This section introduces the reader to the subject area in the project. It may include such things as:

- how the need for the system etc was identified,
- the nature of the
- application area, the relationship with any industrial partner and so on.
