Newman,2013-01-11 Building on Karabenick's earlier volume on this topic and maintaining its high standards of scholarship and intellectual rigor Help Seeking in Academic Settings: Goals, Groups, and Contexts brings together contemporary work that is theoretically as well as practically important. It highlights current trends in the area and gives expanded attention to applications to teaching and learning. The contributors represent an internationally recognized group of scholars and researchers who provide depth of analysis and breadth of coverage. Help seeking is currently considered an important learning strategy that is linked to students' achievement goals and academic performance. This volume not only provides answers to who, why, and when learners seek help but raises questions for readers to consider for future research. Chapters examine help seeking as a self-regulated learning strategy and its relationship to achievement goal theory; help seeking in collaborative groups; culture and help seeking in K-12 and college contexts; help seeking and academic support services such as academic advising centers; help seeking in computer-based interactive learning environments; help seeking in response to peer harassment at school; and help seeking in non-academic settings such as the workplace. This book is intended for researchers, academic support personnel, and graduate students across the field of educational psychology, particularly those interested in student motivation and self-regulation.

Park Woolf, 2010-07-28 Building Intelligent Interactive Tutors discusses educational systems that assess a student's knowledge and are adaptive to a student's learning needs. The impact of computers has not been generally felt in education due to lack of hardware, teacher training, and sophisticated software, and because current instructional software is neither truly responsive to student needs nor flexible enough to emulate teaching. Dr. Woolf taps into 20 years of research on intelligent tutors to bring designers and developers a broad range of issues and methods that produce the best intelligent learning environments possible, whether for classroom or life-long learning. The book describes multidisciplinary approaches to using computers for teaching, reports on research, development, and real-world experiences, and discusses intelligent tutors, web-based learning systems, adaptive learning systems, intelligent agents, and intelligent multimedia. It is recommended for professionals, graduate students, and others in computer science and educational technology who are developing online tutoring systems to support e-learning and who want to build intelligence into the system. Combines both theory and practice to offer most in-depth and up-to-date treatment of intelligent tutoring systems available. Presents powerful drivers of virtual teaching systems, including cognitive science, artificial intelligence, and the Internet. Features algorithmic material that enables programmers and researchers to design building components and intelligent systems.
