A laboratory activity for the Living Environment

Introduction

Botanococcus curvatus is a valuable plant because it produces Curc1, a compound used for treating certain kinds of cancer. Curc1 cannot be produced in the laboratory. Botanococcus curvatus grows very slowly and is on the endangered species list, so its ability to provide Curc1 in large quantities is limited.

Species that are more closely related to Botanococcus curvatus are more likely to produce the important substance Curc1 because their DNA is similar. If you remember, DNA codes the directions for making proteins and curc1 is a protein. There are other plant species that are plentiful (A, B, C, and D) maybe related to Botanococcus curvatus. You will work as a researcher to:

- gather structural and molecular evidence to determine which plant species is most closely related to the top tiered species (since it is not real), Botanococcus curvatus
- use this evidence to decide which plant species is most likely to serve as a source of the important substance Curc1.

How are we going to figure out which plant is most closely related?
We will use some different tests to complete the task.

- Three different forms of structural evidence.
- An enzyme catalyzed reaction test
- DNA gel Electrophoresis
- Paper Chromatography
- Molecular evidence
