1. What is psychology the study of? (p. 4)
The scientific study of behavior and mental processes
2. What are the four goals of psychology? (p. 4-5)

4. Wundt utilized objective introspection to study the contents of the mind. What is objective introspection? Give an example of what a person might be asked to do during objective introspection. (pp. 6-7)
It is the process of examining and measuring one's own thoughts and mental activities. An example of this would be holding a rock in your hand and tell the person conducting the experiment all the emotions and sensations from the rock.
5. Compare and contrast structuralism and functionalism. Who is the major historical figure associated with each of these perspectives? (pp. 7-8)
Structuralism: focus of the study is the structure of the mind (Titchener/Wundt)

Laboratory Observation: gives the researcher more control.
Case Studies: Study of one individual in great detail.
Surveys: asking a series of questions
8. What is a correlation? What is the difference between a positive correlation and a negative correlation? (pp. 26-27)
It is a measure of the relationship between two or more variables.
Positive: the two variables increase in the same direction
Negative: the two variables have an inverse relationship
9. Explain why correlation does not prove causation. (p. 27)
Just because two variables are related to each other, researchers cannot assume that one of them causes the other one to occur.
10. _____ is the only research method that allows psychologists to determine the cause of a behavior. (p. 28)
Experiment
11. What is an experiment? (p. 28)
It is a deliberate manipulation of a variable to see if corresponding changes in behavior result, allowing the determination of cause-and-effect relationship.
