Wade Savage, Philip Ehrlich, 2013-06-17 Measurement theory has only recently become recognized as a legitimate specialized field of inquiry This text covers a wide range of issues of central concern to contemporary measurement theorists and a broad range of philosophical perspectives are represented The formalist representationalist approach defines measurement as the assignment of numbers to entities and events to represent their properties and relations It also states that measurement theory is supposed to analyze the concept of a scale of measurement describe various types of scales and their uses and formulate the conditions required for the existence of scales of various types Since this approach dominates contemporary measurement theory the volume begins with essays by some of its leading architects In order to allow for diverse points of view the book also includes articles that attempt to broaden this approach and several that even criticize the approach Kant's Highest Good Lawrence Robin Pasternack, 2025-10-10 Kant's doctrine of the Highest Good is among the most perplexing and controversial aspects of his practical philosophy There is widespread disagreement about exactly what the Highest Good is how Kant argues for it and what function it is supposed to fulfill The Highest Good is also situated at the nexus of some of the most acrimonious disputes within Kant scholarship This book is the first comprehensive English language interpretation of the Highest Good's internal structure its development and its place within Kant's broader philosophical system Pasternack offers sustained engagement with the contemporary secondary literature on these issues and discusses key texts of the German Enlightenment which helped to shape Kant's conception of the Highest Good He argues that prevailing interpretations rely upon a faulty understanding of the Highest Good one which has its roots in a number of early interpretive missteps Pasternack proceeds to discuss how the Highest Good relates to other elements of Kant's philosophical system including the conflicting interpretations of his moral psychology the epistemic strictures of Transcendental Idealism and how to reconcile his positive philosophy of religion with these strictures
