

How the British Soldier of 1939 Goes to War

The "battle dress" of the British Army was finally approved in April 1939, and is now worn by both men and officers. It is a two-piece garment of khaki serge, consisting of a blouse and breeches buckling at the wrists and ankles, the ankles also being protected by web anklets. The weight of the uniform is about 12 lbs. This soldier is wearing battle dress, but is not completely equipped. When wearing full marching order, the infantryman carries a valise (or pack) on his back in place of the haversack now worn, the latter being transferred to the left hip where the bayonet and counter-bayonet on the right by a water-bottle.

The valise holds the great-coat, cordigan when not worn, and such other personal effects as individual soldier in packing can get into it; while in the haversack are a hold-all with combs, tooth-brush, shaving outfit, fitted haversack, socks, nose tin, emergency ration, etc. The large patch pocket on the breeches is to hold maps and papers. Though officers carry some additional articles of equipment, such as revolvers and binoculars and compasses, there is nothing in their uniform to distinguish them from the men except the shoulder badge.
