Mobilizing the South Christopher M. Rein,2022-08-23 Throughout its history the United States has fought its major wars by mobilizing large numbers of citizen soldiers While the small peacetime regular army provided trained leadership and a framework for growth the citizen soldier from the minuteman of the American Revolution to Civil War volunteers and the draftees of World War II have successfully prosecuted the nation s major wars But the Army and the nation have never fully resolved the myriad problems surrounding the mobilization and employment of reserve troops National Guard divisions in World War II suffered from neglect during the interwar period and Great Depression and regular Army commanders often replaced or relieved National Guard officers which generated lingering resentment At the same time draftees from across the nation diluted the regional affiliations of many units with a corresponding effect on morale and esprit de corps Chris Rein s study of one division recruited from the Gulf South and employed in the Southwest Pacific Theater in 1944 and 1945 highlights the challenges of reserve mobilization training and the combat deployment of National Guard units His account demonstrates the still strong connections between the local communities that hosted and supported National Guard companies before the war even after an influx of new personnel nationalized the units and they shipped overseas The 31st Division reorganized after combat deployment in World War I consisted primarily of infantry regiments from Florida Alabama Mississippi and until 1942 Louisiana Mobilized for federal service in late 1940 the division participated in the critical Louisiana and Carolina Maneuvers in 1941 but then languished for the next two years as a training organization though it provided trained cadres and replacements for other divisions the Army deployed to Europe and the Pacific In 1944 the division finally shipped overseas enduring the brutal conditions in the Southwest Pacific but successfully conducting landings on the New Guinea coast in support of Gen Douglas MacArthur's island hopping campaign directed at liberating the Philippines. After a change in leadership on the second day of the amphibious assault on Morotai, the division supported the liberation of Mindanao, the southernmost major island in the archipelago, before redeploying for demobilization at the end of 1945. Rein's study traces the division's decades of duty from the interwar period when it contended with a series of devastating natural disasters through its mobilization and combat deployment. However, within the 31st Division's story, there are several significant issues that remain highly relevant for reserve deployment today. The first centers on the issue of World War II era National Guard leadership. The Army implemented a purge of overage and less competent National Guard division commanders in order to replace them with younger officers of the regular Army. Maj Gen John C. Persons, a pre-war Birmingham resident and Alabama National Guard officer, commanded the division throughout the peacetime mobilization and training and the first operation in New Guinea, only to be summarily fired on the second day of the Morotai landings, an action not adequately explained in the existing literature. The second issue concerns the Army's nationalization of regional units. While this policy has the benefit of spreading any casualties across the nation rather than duplicate the horrific losses of the Bedford Boys of the 29th Infantry Division, that devastated one small Virginia community, it also erodes regional identity and esprit de corps. This work is a case study of the strength and weaknesses of units with a regional identity and explores the connections with the home front once that identity erodes. It also examines the Dixie Division's operational and strategic evolution but just as importantly details drawn from soldiers' correspondence and oral histories to show how their exposure to a larger world, including service alongside African American and Filipino units, changed their views on race and post-war society. Corea the Hermit Nation William Elliot Griffis, 1888 Og nu venter vi på skib Marcus Lauesen, 2017-03-23 Og nu venter vi på skib er en slægtsroman hvis handling foregår over ganske få dage. Den gamle Juliane er overhoved i sin familie. For hende fåles slægts storhedstid ganske present selv om den faktisk befinder sig et godt stykke tilbage. Alligevel insisterer Juliane på retten til at være stolt af sin slægt. I glimtvisse tilbageblik folder Julianes bevidsthedslandskab sig ud og man lærer både familie og dets 80 rige matriark at kende. Marcus Lauesen 1907-75 var en dansk forfatter og digter. Marcus Lauesen voksede op på Aabenraa-egnen i Sønderjylland inden genforeningen. Den sønderjyske identitet er et genkommende tema i Marcus Lauesens forfatterskab.
