

A photograph of an electrical transformer, likely a 480V to 240V single-phase transformer, mounted on a metal base. The transformer has several colored wires connected to it: a thick black wire, a red wire, a blue wire, and a green wire. The wires are bundled together and run across a wooden surface. The transformer itself is a complex of metal and electronic components, with a yellow label visible on top. The background is a wooden workbench.
