Grgeography Pnov 2014:

Understanding Cultural Geography Jon Anderson, 2015-03-24 Understanding Cultural Geography Places and Traces offers a comprehensive introduction to perhaps the most exciting and challenging area of human geography. By focusing on the notion of place as a key means through which culture and identity is grounded, the book showcases the broad range of theories, methods and practices used within the discipline. This book not only introduces the reader to the rich and complex history of cultural geography but also the key terms on which the discipline is built. From these insights, the book approaches place as an ongoing composition of traces, highlighting the dynamic and ever-changing nature of the world around us. The second edition has been fully revised and updated to incorporate recent literature and up-to-date case studies. It also adopts a new seven-section structure and benefits from the addition of two new chapters: Place and Mobility and Place and Language. Through its broad coverage of issues such as age, race, scale, nature, capitalism and the body, the book provides valuable perspectives into the cultural relationships between people and place. Anderson gives critical insights into these important issues, helping us to understand and engage with the various places that make up our lives. Understanding Cultural Geography is an ideal text for students being introduced to the discipline through either undergraduate or postgraduate degree courses. The book outlines how the theoretical ideas, empirical foci and methodological techniques of cultural geography illuminate and make sense of the places we inhabit and contribute to. This is a timely update on a highly successful text that incorporates a vast foundation of knowledge: an invaluable book for lecturers and students. The SIJORI Cross-Border Region Francis E. Hutchinson, Terence Chong, 2016-06-14 Twenty-five years ago, the governments of Singapore, Malaysia and Indonesia agreed to jointly promote the city-state of Johor in Malaysia and the Riau Islands in Indonesia. Facilitated by common cultural references, a more distant shared history and complementary attributes, interactions between the three territories developed quickly. Logistics networks have proliferated and production chains link firms based in one location with affiliates or transport facilities in the other territories. These cross-border links have enabled all three locations to develop their economies and enjoy rising standards of living. Initially economic in nature, the interactions between Singapore, Johor and the Riau Islands have multiplied and grown deeper. Today, people cross the borders to work, go to school or avail of an increasing range of goods and services. New political, social and cultural phenomena have developed. Policymakers in the various territories now need to reconcile economic imperatives and issues of identity and sovereignty. Enabled by their proximity and increasing opportunities, families have also begun to straddle borders with resulting questions about citizenship and belonging. Using the Cross-Border Region framework, which seeks to analyse these three territories as one entity simultaneously divided and bound together by its borders, this book brings together scholars from a range of disciplines. Its 18 chapters and more than 20 maps examine the interaction between Singapore, Johor and the Riau Islands over the past quarter-century and seek to shed light on how these territories could develop in the future. Disability,

Avoidance and the Academy David Bolt, Claire Penketh, 2017-07-14 Disability is a widespread phenomenon indeed a potentially universal one as life expectancies rise Within the academic world it has relevance for all disciplines yet is often dismissed as a niche market or someone else's domain This collection explores how academic avoidance of disability studies and disability theory is indicative of social prejudice and highlights conversely how the academy can and does engage with disability studies This innovative book brings together work in the humanities and the social sciences and draws on the riches of cultural diversity to challenge institutional and disciplinary avoidance Divided into three parts the first looks at how educational institutions and systems implicitly uphold double standards which can result in negative experiences for staff and students who are disabled The second part explores how disability studies informs and improves a number of academic disciplines from social work to performance arts The final part shows how more diverse cultural engagement offers a way forward for the academy demonstrating ways in which we can make more explicit the interdisciplinary significance of disability studies and by extension disability theory activism experience and culture Disability Avoidance and the Academy Challenging Resistance will interest students and scholars of disability studies education studies and cultural studies

The Integration Imperative Michael P. Gillingham, Greg R. Halseth, Chris J. Johnson, Margot W. Parkes, 2016-04-05 The purpose of this work is to develop a better understanding and thinking about the cumulative impacts of multiple natural resource development projects. Cumulative impacts are now one of the most pressing but complex challenges facing governments, industry, communities, and conservation and natural resource professionals. There has been technical and policy research exploring how cumulative environmental impacts can be assessed and managed. These studies, however, have failed to consider the necessary integration of community, environment, and health. Informed by knowledge and experience in northern British Columbia, this book seeks to expand our understanding of the cumulative impacts of natural resource development through an integrated lens. The book offers a timely response to a growing imperative: proposing integrative responses to multiple natural resource developments in a way that addresses converging environment, community, and health issues. Informed by the editors' experiences across several complementary areas of expertise, we envision this book as appealing to a wide range of researchers, educators, and practitioners with relevance to a growing audience with appetite for and interest in integrative approaches.

Posthuman Research Practices in Education Carol Taylor, Christina Hughes, 2016-04-08 How do we include and develop understandings of those beyond the human aspects of the world in social research? Through fifteen contributions from leading international thinkers, this book provides original approaches to posthumanist research practices in education. It responds to questions which consider the effect and reach of posthuman research.

The Great Transition: Shifting from Fossil Fuels to Solar and Wind Energy Lester R. Brown, 2015-04-20 The great energy transition from fossil fuels to renewable sources of energy is under way. As oil insecurity deepens, the extraction risks of fossil fuels rise, and concerns about climate instability cast a shadow over the future of coal, a new world energy economy is emerging. The old economy, fueled by oil, natural gas, and coal, is being replaced with one powered by wind, solar, and geothermal energy. The Great Transition details the accelerating pace of this global energy revolution. As many countries become less enamored with coal and nuclear power, they are embracing an array of clean renewable energies. Whereas solar energy projects were once small-scale, largely designed for residential use, energy investors are now building utility-scale solar projects. Strides are being made: some of the huge wind farm complexes under construction in China will each produce as much electricity as several nuclear power plants, and an electrified transport system supplemented by the use of bicycles could reshape the way we think about mobility.

Fiction, Invention and Hyper-reality Carole M.

Cusack, Pavol Kosnáč, 2016-11-18 The twentieth century was a period of rapid change for religion. Secularisation resulted in a dramatic fall in church attendance in the West and the 1950s and 1960s saw the introduction of new religions including the International Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKCON), the Church of Scientology and the Children of God. New religions were regarded with suspicion by society in general and Religious Studies scholars alike until the 1990s when the emergence of a second generation of new religions based on popular cultural forms including films, novels, computer games and comic books, and highly individualistic spiritualities, confirmed the utter transformation of the religious spiritual landscape. Indeed, Scientology and ISKCON appeared almost traditional and conservative when compared to the radically de-institutionalised, eclectic, parodic, fun-loving and experimental fiction-based, invented and hyper-real religions. In this book, scholarly treatments of cutting-edge religious and spiritual trends are brought into conversation with contributions by representatives of Dharma, the Church of All Worlds, the Temple of the Jedi Order and Tolkien spirituality groups. This book will simultaneously entertain, shock, challenge and delight scholars of religious studies as well as those with a wider interest in new religious movements.

The School of Oriental and African Studies Ian Brown, 2016-07-21 The School of Oriental and African Studies, a college of the University of London, was established in 1916 principally to train the colonial administrators who ran the British Empire in the languages of Asia and Africa. It was founded with an explicitly imperial purpose. Yet the School would come to transcend this function to become a world centre of scholarship and learning in many important ways, challenging that imperial origin. Drawing on the School's own extensive administrative records, on interviews with current and past staff, and on the records of government departments, Ian Brown explores the work of the School over its first century. He considers the expansion in the School's configuration of studies from the initial focus on languages to its changing relationships with government and the major contributions that have been made by the School to scholarly and public understandings of Asia, Africa and the Middle East.

Deleuze and the City Helene Frichot, 2016-01-27 Defining the lives of a majority of the world's population, the question of the city has risen to the fore as one of the most urgent issues of our time, uniting concerns across the terrain of climate, policies, global financing, localised struggles and multi-disciplinary research. Deleuze and the City rests on a conviction that philosophy is crucially important for advancing knowledge on cities and for allowing us to envisage new forms of urban life toward a more sustainable future. It gathers some of the most original thinkers and accomplished scholars in contemporary urban studies, showing how Deleuze and Guattari's philosophical project is essential for our thinking through the multi-scalar, uneven and contested landscapes that constitute the city today. Case studies range from the laboratory urbanism of an Austrian ski resort and a sustainable Swedish shopping mall to the urbidal refurbishments of Haifa.

Neighbourhood Policy and the Construction of the European External Borders Filippo Celata, Raffaella Coletti, 2015-06-11

This book looks both backward and forward with regard to the European Union's political strategies towards its neighbouring countries. By bringing together the perspectives of critical geopolitics, policy studies and border studies, it presents a comprehensive review of the European Neighbourhood Policy and how it impacts the ongoing construction of the EU's external frontiers. Is the EU committed to promoting integration in a wider European space or is a fortress Europe emerging where the strengthening of internal cohesion is coupled with the militarisation of its external borders? The book aims to problematize this question by showing how the EU's external policies are based on a mixture of openness and closure, inclusion and exclusion, cooperation and securitisation. The European Neighbourhood Policy is a controversial strategy where regionalization and bordering, homogenisations and differentiations, centrifugal and centripetal forces proceed side by side in an explicit attempt to construct a selective, mobile and fragmented border. A specific focus is devoted to the diversity of geo-strategies the EU is pursuing in its neighbouring countries and regions, macro-regional strategies and cross-border cooperation initiatives as new scales of cooperation and the role of other global players.
