TO DO

Light can be considered as a beam, or ray, that travels in straight lines if the size of wavelength (propagation) is less than by reflection or refraction. When a light ray travelling in the medium hits the interface between a different medium, part of it is reflected back into the same medium (according to the law of reflection) and the other part is refracted (part of the light will enter the medium, and the direction will change). This process is called as reflection, according to reflection follows the law of reflection.

Law of Reflection: As seen in Figure 1, showing that when a light ray strikes a surface, the angle of incidence, θ_i , is equal to the angle of reflection, θ_r . Both angles are measured from the normal, the perpendicular to surface. This is true for flat as well as curved surfaces. Curved surfaces which bulge outward called convex, while those that bulge inwardly called concave. If the surface is spherical, or circular, then the reflecting ray may either converge to a point (focus, or focal point) or diverge after reflection (Figure 2).

(In all figures, the red line indicates light ray, the dashed line indicates the normal).
