5 Natural Home Remedies For Frizzy Hair

1. Apple Cider Vinegar Rinse

The presence of acetic acid in apple cider vinegar gives it a pH level similar to that of human hair. Using this rinse regular may help to bring hair to its ideal acidity and, as an added bonus, leaves it with a healthy shine. After shampooing your hair (and completely rinsing it out), pour apple cider vinegar over entire head and let sit for about 30 seconds before rinsing — for best results, rinse with cool water. Condition your hair as you normally would. If you're not a fan of vinegar's scent, dilute in water before applying.

2. Avocado & Olive Oil Mask

Think of this as a natural conditioner for your hair — avocado and olive oil both harbor amazing hydrating benefits, and avocado also possesses good fatty acids to help soothe frizziness. Mash up avocado and add a splash of olive oil, and mix together. After shampooing, apply avocado mask to your entire head of hair. Let sit for 30 minutes to an hour, then rinse thoroughly. Condition as you would normally.

3. Raw Egg & Olive Oil Treatment

Whisk one raw egg and mix in a spoonful of olive oil. Egg yolks are rich in fats and proteins, and egg whites contain an enzyme — lysozyme — which kill bacteria and remove unwanted oils. Meanwhile, olive oil acts as an emollient that locks moisture into your hair. Apply this mixture to your hair prior to shampooing/conditioning and let sit for about 30 minutes before rinsing and washing hair.

4. Coconut Oil or Olive Oil Treatment

Coconut oil is incredibly hydrating and, of course, smells amazing. Rub a dollop through your hair when it's feeling dry, focusing primarily on your ends as opposed to your roots (to avoid scalp becoming too oily). Another great option is olive oil — put a few drops in your hand and run through damp hair to lock in moisture.

5. Carbonated Water Rinse

The simplest and easiest method of de-frizzing is with a carbonated water rinse. After washing your hair, give it a final rinse with carbonated water. The low pH level helps to reduce frizz, similar to apple cider vinegar.
