Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the body composition and muscle strength of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The men were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a resistance training group (RT). The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program. The CON group performed no resistance training. The RT group showed significant increases in muscle strength and body composition. The RT group showed significant increases in muscle strength and body composition. The RT group showed significant increases in muscle strength and body composition.

Abstract

• Effectiveness of parenting advice (measured as the proportion of parents who reported that the advice was helpful) was significantly higher for parents who received the intervention than for those who did not (75% vs. 60%, $p = .001$).
