

Tips for naming molecules

There are three steps, though that I have found useful over the years. The first concerns organic molecules, the second, inorganic, the third, for polymers, simple ones.

Remember that the name of an organic molecule has three parts:

- Numbering (if necessary)
- Base: the parent chain (length and C/C bonding)
 - o First realise that there will be a complexity
- Suffix: substituents dictated by the highest priority functional group

1. Start off by identifying the highest priority functional group: this helps you determine the suffix of the molecule's name which can help you determine where you start numbering the parent chain. In subsequent paragraphs, however, I mention you begin to identify the parts of the molecule that will be added to the prefix.

There will be four C and H groups left you have to determine groups that are found in priority functional groups. The prefix is the rest.

2. There begins to find the longest continuous carbon chain you can (the only thing is: branching is good)

- Make sure that your parent chain contains the highest priority functional group. Some groups have to be on the end carbon
 - o Carboxylic acids, aldehydes, nitriles, amines, amides
- Find the other side of the chain that most carbon chains are the longest the most in same complex structure
- Always contain all the functional groups and multiple bonds in the structure

3. Begin to number the carbon, the lowest number that you can so that the end of the chain is the parent chain number by the following substituents (if there are groups)

- The highest priority functional group
- Any multiple bonds
- The substituents shown in the end
- The complex that contains the substituents

4. Once you have numbered the parent chain, you can now the appropriate name to indicate the length of the chain.

5. Identify the other substituents that are present in the parent chain and add them to the name. Additionally, identify the carbon number that the other chain is in (the chain is the name)

- Only C/C single bonds are
