■ Chapter 10

- 10-1. Internationalization strategies: How can professional services be a viable internationalization strategy for a service firm?
- Service firms benefit from international trade in several dimensions of production:
"Service" internationalization involves the attempt to place some activities within other countries' production and distribution systems to benefit from local supply and distribution facilities."
Thomas H. Dierkes, Production and Trade in Services
- 10-2. Service Internationalization Strategies: What's the difference between direct and indirect internationalization approaches to service firms' global market strategies?
- One class of service firms is "exporters." These firms are in domestic markets and export their services to other countries using international distribution facilities. In other words, they export their services to other countries using international distribution facilities.
Indirectly, service firms internationalize using international supply and distribution facilities. This means that some of the internationalizing companies are going to other ways.
- 10-3. Internationalization and E-Business: What have researchers concluded about the importance of the Internet to global market strategies for service?
- Some researchers point out that, just because the Internet is a global communication "space" and the Internet is a global communication space, it does not mean that global strategies for service firms are going to be successful using the Internet.
- 10-4. E-Business and International Strategies: What's the impact of the Internet on service firms' global market strategies?
- One study of internationalizing service firms provided several interesting findings. Internationalizing service firms in a global communication environment have higher international communication, internationalization, and in general internationalization. The study also found that internationalizing service firms are more likely to be successful in their global market strategies.
1. Internationalizing service firms are more likely to be successful in their global market strategies.
  2. Internationalizing service firms are more likely to be successful in their global market strategies.
  3. Internationalizing service firms are more likely to be successful in their global market strategies.
  4. Internationalizing service firms are more likely to be successful in their global market strategies.
