Chapter 3

Instructor's Manual

Chapter Objectives

Chapter 3, Marketing Management: The Marketing Process, is a comprehensive introduction to the marketing process. It covers the marketing process from the identification of a marketing opportunity to the implementation of a marketing program. The chapter is divided into four main sections: (1) the marketing process, (2) the marketing environment, (3) the marketing strategy, and (4) the marketing program. The chapter is designed to provide students with a solid understanding of the marketing process and its components.

This chapter should be covered after Chapter 1, Introduction to Marketing, and Chapter 2, Marketing Environment.

Students should learn the following points:

- Marketing Management. Marketing management is the process of identifying, selecting, and implementing a marketing program that will create a competitive advantage for the organization. It is a dynamic process that involves the identification of a marketing opportunity, the selection of a marketing strategy, and the implementation of a marketing program.
- Marketing Process. The marketing process is a series of steps that lead to the implementation of a marketing program. It begins with the identification of a marketing opportunity, followed by the selection of a marketing strategy, and ends with the implementation of a marketing program.
- Marketing Environment. The marketing environment is the set of external factors that influence the marketing process. It includes the economic environment, the social environment, the technological environment, and the legal environment.
- Marketing Strategy. A marketing strategy is a plan of action that guides the implementation of a marketing program. It is a statement of the organization's marketing goals and the strategies that will be used to achieve them.
- Marketing Program. A marketing program is a set of marketing activities that are designed to implement a marketing strategy. It includes the development of a marketing mix, the implementation of a marketing program, and the evaluation of the marketing program.
