Sprawling Cities and Our Endangered Public Health Stephen Verderber, 2012-05-31

Sprawl is an unsustainable pattern of growth that threatens to undermine the health of communities globally

It has been a dominant mid to late twentieth century growth pattern in developed countries and in the twenty first century has shown widespread signs of proliferation in India China and other growing countries

The World Health Organization cites sprawl for its serious adverse public health consequences for humans and ecological habitats

The many adverse impacts of sprawl on the health of individuals communities and biological ecosystems are well documented

Architects have been rightly criticized for failing to grasp the aesthetic and functional challenge to create buildings and places that mitigate sprawl while simultaneously promoting healthier active lifestyles in neighbourhoods and communities

Sprawling Cities and Our Endangered Public Health examines the past and present role of architecture in relation to the public health consequences of unmitigated sprawl and the ways in which it threatens our future

Topics examined include the role of twentieth century theories of architecture and urbanism and their public health ramifications examples of current unsustainable practices design considerations for the creation of health promoting architecture and landscape urbanism a critique of recent case studies of sustainable alternatives to unchecked sprawl and prognostications for the future Architects public health professionals landscape architects town planners and a broad range of policy specialists will be able to apply the methods and tools presented here to counter unmitigated sprawl and to create architecture that promotes active healthier lifestyles Stephen Verderber is an internationally respected evidence based researcher practitioner educator in the emerging interdisciplinary field of architecture health and society This his latest book on the interactions between our buildings our cities and our health is an invaluable reference source for everyone concerned with sustainable architecture and landscape urbanism Beef Today ,1988 Professional Service Firms and Politics in a Global Era Chris Hurl,Anne Vogelpohl,2021-08-31 This volume explores the influence of professional service firms on public policy making from a global perspective Drawing on cases studies from around the world researchers from different disciplines including sociology political science geography anthropology history and management studies examine how professional service firms have generated power in the policy making process The chapters further investigate the structure and organization of these firms and their relationship with public agencies They discuss the impact of strategies techniques and models promoted by these firms on political decision making And they analyze how these firms have contributed to the formation of global policy pipelines facilitating the quick diffusion of policy ideas across time and space Exposing how professional advisors can undermine democratic decision making the chapters in this book explore the potential for resistance and regulation of public private relationships Care and Maintenance of Farm Machinery Norwin Braun,1968 Farm Journal ,1992 Catalog of Copyright Entries.
