

Lewis test bank ch 33

1. The nurse is developing a teaching plan for a 64-year-old patient with coronary artery disease (CAD). Which factor should the nurse focus on during the teaching session?

1. Family history of coronary artery disease
2. Elevated low-density lipoprotein (LDL) level
3. Greater risk associated with the patient's gender
4. Increased risk of cardiovascular disease with aging

ANS: B

Because family history, gender, and age are nonmodifiable risk factors, the nurse should focus on the patient's LDL level. Decreases in LDL will help reduce the patient's risk for developing CAD.

DIF: Cognitive Level: Apply (application) TOP: Nursing Process: Planning MSC: NCLEX: Health Promotion and Maintenance

2. Which nursing intervention is likely to be most effective when assisting the patient with coronary artery disease to make appropriate dietary changes?

1. Inform the patient about a diet containing no saturated fat and minimal salt.
2. Emphasize the increased cardiac risk unless the patient makes dietary changes.
3. Help the patient modify favorite high-fat recipes by using monounsaturated oils.
4. Give the patient a list of low-sodium, low-cholesterol foods to include in the diet.

ANS: C

Lifestyle changes are more likely to be successful when consideration is given to the patient's values and preferences. The highest percentage of calories from fat should come from monounsaturated or polyunsaturated fats. Although low-sodium and low-cholesterol foods are appropriate, providing the patient with a list alone is not likely to be successful in making dietary changes. Completely removing saturated fat from the diet is not a realistic expectation. Up to 7% of calories in the therapeutic lifestyle changes diet can come from saturated fat. Telling the patient about the increased risk without assisting further with strategies for dietary change is unlikely to be successful.

DIF: Cognitive Level: Analyze (analysis)

TOP: Nursing Process: Implementation MSC: NCLEX: Physiological Integrity

3. The nurse is admitting a patient who has chest pain. Which assessment data suggest that the pain is from an acute myo-cardial infarction?

1. The pain increases with deep breathing.
2. The pain has lasted longer than 30 minutes.
3. The pain is relieved after the patient takes nitroglycerin.
4. The pain is reproducible when the patient raises the arms.
