This conversion chart is based on educational levels from the published "Lexile Framework" chart. A smoothed curve was fit through the grade-level points indicated here, and regression analysis provided the equations:

$$\text{Lexile} = 500 \ln(\text{Grade Level}) \quad \text{or, the counterpart} \quad \text{GradeLevel} = e^{0.002(\text{Lexile})}$$

The resulting regression equation was then used to calculate the educational grade-levels in the above table. A separate study of over 700 titles confirmed that their Accelerated Reader® (Advantage Learning's reading management software) reading levels and Lexile ratings are correlated, and that regression analysis on published Accelerated Reader and Lexile reading levels produces a very similar conversion equation.

Reading well across disciplines and within varied contexts will help students to be versatile, flexible, deep readers who can better learn from their reading, transfer skills across subjects and use strategies to meet the unique demands of reading in each content area. Jennifer Serravallo, Research based, easy to use lesson structures for explicit and engaging teaching. In Teaching Reading Across the Day, literacy expert Jennifer Serravallo provides nine effective, predictable, research based lesson structures that help busy teachers save planning time and focus their teaching and student attention on content rather than procedures. Each of the nine lesson structures: read aloud, phonics and spelling, vocabulary, focus, shared reading, close reading, guided inquiry, reader's theater and conversation has its own chapter and features a wealth of resources that let you see the lessons in action in ELA, Science and Social Studies classes including an annotated teaching vignette, lesson explanation and research notes, tips for planning, structure and timing suggestions and ideas for responsive teaching. Detailed planning templates and 22 accompanying online videos covering over 3 hours of classroom footage. Jen's reflections, key look fors and ideas for next steps. The nine lesson structures can be used with any curriculum or core program, text and subject making it easier for teachers to maximize explicit and engaging teaching time across the day and simplify planning and preparation. Jen incorporates a wide range of compelling research about how best to teach reading to every student in your class and translates the research or the science of teaching reading into high leverage moves you can count on to deliver powerful lessons again and again. She also honors the art of teaching reading, helping teachers tap into their experience and hone their expertise to make quick, effective classroom decisions that take student learning to the next level. Challenges and Channels Ikram Ahmed Ibrahim Elsherif, Piers Michael Smith, 2016-06-22. This book deals with the challenges of teaching the English language and literature in the Middle East and North Africa region with a special focus on the Gulf countries. It consists of different articles by an international group of educators and scholars who have first hand experience in teaching the English language and its literatures in this region. The contributors not only investigate student attitudes, cultural, political and administrative obstacles and challenges but they also embark upon soul searching journeys in which they examine their own attitudes, teaching strategies, cultural prejudices and preconceptions and personal responses to their teaching.

environments They also explore from their own personal experiences the crisis in the humanities cultural hegemony ethics in translation cross cultural encounters pedagogical challenges textuality and second language acquisition among other issues and concerns As such the book represents both a scholarly investigation and a colorful palette of personal experience and response to human encounters in the classroom
