Macro-Economic Analysis

Introduction:

Economics is the study of the way individual and society make choices to satisfy unlimited wants in the light of scarcity of goods and services. This scarcity of goods and services is caused by availability of productive resources in limited quantity. Thus, economics as a positive science analyses various economic variables and as normative science tries to optimize the decision situations of making choices.

1. Economic Analysis

Economics being the core of all material human activities call for specific analysis of variety of economic variables and their interactions so as to facilitate economic decision making of
