cleaning up

Dishwashing can be a reasonable task or an ongoing nightmare. Teach yourself and your boys and men how to cope with this inevitable burden. If you didn't learn early on to clean up as you go along, please start now. I cannot emphasize this enough: A clean, well-ordered kitchen translates to a tidy, well-ordered mind for cooking.

It's a known, proven, scientifically accurate fact that men simply do not naturally recognize a mess or full garbage cans when staring it directly in the face. For an example: Teach, repeat, and have your boys to clean up after themselves as early and as often as possible. If you don't, they might become that annoying family member: drunken roommate, or instigator of relationship disaster later. If you've inherited an adult male lacking in cleanup skills, your task is a harder one, but not impossible.

Figure out the best ways to clean and dry the dishes and tidy up the kitchen, whether you're working in a tiny studio apartment or a big house, ask yourself, "What's the plan?"

Basic cleaning

- Empty the garbage: When it's full just dump it, someone has to take it out and put it in a new garbage bag. As you clean up, dishes will need dishwashing, but we compile and recyle accessible recycling materials, a plastic bin, one labeled for glass and one for plastic, and give them next periodic cleaning, and, though please before dishwashing.
- Wipe the counter: Wipe a clean sponge with a barfose material, a plastic, a brush, another another dish soap, and a couple drops, dry towels or hand.
- Wash if you have a dishwasher: Fill a bowl or a basin with hot soapy water and put it in the sink. Soak the utensils, dry side down, in the hot water with a little and then wash. If not, return the dirty food for more cleaning.
- Wash your boys how to efficiently load and unload a dishwasher: It doesn't matter naturally to them. They think the crystal glasses are perfectly fine loaded next to a heavy metal one, neither of which belongs in a dishwasher. Soaps off food particles and lightly rinse plates then wash out by side, and after use, in the bottom-right of the dishwasher. Dishes and glasses are best next to each other in the top rack. Don't forget the metal utensils into the silverware holder or the soapy water won't circulate and clean. Start the dishwasher only when it is completely full. Empty the same way you loaded, gently stacked back in the cabinet, glasses, tea, and silverware back to their own place in the silverware drawer. Some bring with other forks, but with the knives or spoons.
- Boys want to have a dishwasher that makes them to think they cooked dry pots, and pots will get clean in a dishwasher even when that a house being loaded to clean by hand in one by daily dry pots and even must be cleaned by hand. Load in a little more, soapy water first. Wash a hard plastic containing liquid that the side to fill the loaded pot off the bottom of the pot, then use the rubber or sponge, or food bits don't get clump together in the mesh.
