Caleb Gattegno and members of a mysterious group of mainly French pure mathematicians who since the 1930s had published under the name of a fictitious Nicolas Bourbaki. In the United States there emerged during the 1950s various attempts to improve U S mathematics curricula and teaching especially in secondary schools and colleges. This side of the story climaxed in 1957 when the Soviet Union succeeded in launching Sputnik the first satellite. Undoubtedly this is a landmark publication in education. The foreword was written by Professor Bob Moon one of a few other scholars to have written on the New Math from an international perspective. The final epilogue chapter by Professor Geert Vanpaemel a historian draws together the overall thrust of the volume and makes links with the general history of curriculum development especially in science education including recent globalization trends.

Modeling Individual Differences in Perceptual Decision Making Joseph W. Houpt, Cheng-Ta Yang, James T. Townsend, 2017-01-18

To deal with the abundant amount of information in the environment in order to achieve our goals human beings adopt a strategy to accumulate some information and filter out other information to ultimately make decisions. Since the development of cognitive science in the 1960s researchers have been interested in understanding how human beings process and accumulate information for decision making. Researchers have conducted extensive behavioral studies and applied a wide range of modeling tools to study human behavior in simple detection tasks and two choice decision tasks e g discrimination classification. In general researchers often assume that the manner in which information is processed for decision making is invariant across individuals given a particular experimental context. Independent variables including speed accuracy instructions stimulus properties i e intensity and characteristics of the participants i e aging cognitive ability are assumed to affect the parameters in a model i e speed of information accumulation response bias but not the way that participants process information e g the order of information processing. Given these assumptions much modeling has been accomplished based on the grouped data rather than the individual data. However a growing number of studies have demonstrated that there were individual differences in the perceptual decision process. In the same task context different groups of the participants may process information in different manners. The capacity and architecture of the decision mechanism were found to vary across individuals implying that humans decision strategies can vary depending on the context to maximize their performance. In this special issue we focused on a particular subset of cognitive models particularly accumulator models multinomial processing trees and systems factorial technology SFT as applied to perceptual decision making. The motivation for the focus on perceptual decision making is threefold. Empirical studies of perception have grown out of a history of making a large number of observations for each individual so as to achieve precise estimates of each individual's performance. This type of data rather than a small number of observations per individual is most amenable to achieving precision in individual level and group level cognitive modeling. Second the interaction between the acquisition of perceptual information and the decisions based on that information to the extent that those processes are distinguishable offers rich data for scientific exploration. Finally there is an increasing interest in the practical application of individual variation in perceptual ability whether to inform perceptual training and expertise or to guide personnel decisions Although these practical applications are beyond the scope of this issue we hope that the research presented herein may serve as the foundation for future endeavors in that domain

Computer Science and Engineering Education for Pre-collegiate Students and Teachers Andrea Burrows,2019-06-11

Now more than ever as a worldwide STEM community we need to know what pre collegiate teachers and students explore learn and implement in relation to computer science and engineering education As computer science and engineering education are not always stand alone courses in pre collegiate schools how are pre collegiate teachers and students learning about these topics How can these subjects be integrated Explore six articles in this book that directly relate to the currently hot topics of computer science and engineering education as they tie into pre collegiate science technology and mathematics realms There is a systematic review article to set the stage of the problem Following this overview are two teacher focused articles on professional development in computer science and entrepreneurship venture training The final three articles focus on varying levels of student work including pre collegiate secondary students exploration of engineering design technology future science teachers collegiate students perceptions of engineering and pre collegiate future engineers exploration of environmental radioactivity All six articles speak to computer science and engineering education in pre collegiate forums but blend into the collegiate world for a look at what all audiences can bring to the conversation about these topics
