1. The first step in the process of the cell cycle is the prophase, in which the chromatin condenses into visible chromosomes. The nuclear envelope then breaks down, and the spindle fibers begin to form.

2. In the second step, metaphase, the chromosomes align themselves in the center of the cell, along the metaphase plate. The spindle fibers attach to the centromeres of the chromosomes.

3. The third step is anaphase, where the sister chromatids separate and are pulled toward opposite poles of the cell by the spindle fibers. This ensures that each daughter cell will receive a complete set of chromosomes.

4. Finally, in telophase, the chromosomes reach the poles of the cell, and new nuclear envelopes form around them. The spindle fibers then disappear, and the cell is ready to divide.

5. The cell cycle concludes with cytokinesis, the process by which the cytoplasm of the cell is divided, resulting in two daughter cells. This completes one full cycle of cell division.

1. Identify the problem. The first step in the problem-solving process is to identify the problem. This involves recognizing the symptoms of the problem and determining the underlying cause.

2. Analyze the problem. Once the problem has been identified, the next step is to analyze it. This involves gathering information about the problem and determining the scope of the problem.

3. Generate solutions. The third step in the problem-solving process is to generate solutions. This involves brainstorming ideas and evaluating the potential of each solution.

4. Implement the solution. Once a solution has been selected, the next step is to implement it. This involves putting the solution into action and monitoring the results.

5. Evaluate the results. The final step in the problem-solving process is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the solution and determining whether the problem has been solved.

Marketing Examples
 1. Target - Target's "Expect More" campaign was a success in the retail market. The campaign was a multi-media effort that included TV, radio, print, and outdoor advertising. The campaign was designed to position Target as a retailer that offers more value for the money. The campaign was successful in increasing Target's sales and market share.
