Heneghan, 2003 Literary criticism American history Even before mass marketing American consumers bought products that gentrified their households and broadcast their sense of the good things in life Bridging literary scholarship archaeology history and art history Whitewashing America Material Culture and Race in the Antebellum Imagination explores how material goods shaped antebellum notions of race class gender and purity From the Revolutionary War until the Civil War American consumers increasingly sought white colored goods Whites preferred mass produced and specialized products avoiding the former dark coarse low quality products issued to slaves White consumers knit around themselves refined domestic items visual reminders of who they were equating wealth discipline and purity with the racially white Clothing paint dinnerware gravestones and buildings staked a visual contrast a portable visible title and deed segregating upper class whites from their lower class neighbors and household servants This book explores what it meant to be white by delving into the whiteness of dishes gravestone art and architecture as well as women s clothing and corsets cleanliness and dental care and complexion Early nineteenth century authors participated in this material economy as well building their literary landscapes in the same way their readers furnished their households and manipulating the understood meanings of things into political statements Such writers as James Fenimore Cooper and John Pendleton Kennedy use setting descriptions to insist on segregation and hierarchy Such authors as Harriet Beecher Stowe Nathaniel Hawthorne Edgar Allan Poe and Herman Melville struggled to negotiate messages of domesticity body politics and privilege according to complex agendas of their own Challenging the popular notions slave narrators such as Frederick Douglass and Harriet Jacobs wielded white objects to reverse the perspective of their white readers and at times to mock their white middle class pretensions Bridget T Heneghan a lecturer in English at Vanderbilt University has been published in Nineteenth Century Studies
