Activity 1: Acceleration in a Gravitational Field

Remember, acceleration is the change in velocity per unit time. Remember that the acceleration is constant in this thought experiment.

Knowledge: Is the gravity vector

Answer: Knowledge Question (Are these NEWTON knowledge items?)

On the right side of the screen, select the box in experiment with gravity as the force, and choose the box that corresponds to your target velocity. And remember, you can only choose one. Also, you will be disappointed to realize that you cannot track distance directly.

1. Why doesn't your box accelerate toward all objects having mass?

The acceleration is due to the gravitational force of the object. The box is not attracted to all objects. The mass of the box is too small.

2. Now that we know why the box is accelerating, why does it accelerate toward the box?

- Because the gravity vector is directed toward the box.
- The box is not attracted to the box. The box is too small.

Newton's Law of Gravity

Newton's Law of Gravity states that the force of gravity between two objects is proportional to the product of their masses and inversely proportional to the square of the distance between them. This is the same as the force of gravity between two objects.

To begin, turn on the Newton's Law of Gravity checkbox in the top right. Then, select the Newton's Law of Gravity checkbox in the top right. The Newton's Law of Gravity checkbox is now checked.

3. Select object A in the top right. Now, select the box in the top right that corresponds to the velocity of the box.

The box is not attracted to the box.

4. Now, select the box in the top right that corresponds to the velocity of the box.

It is not A because the box is too small. The box is too small.

5. Now, select the box in the top right that corresponds to the velocity of the box.

The box is not attracted to the box. The box is too small.
