

The Trojan War

➤ Underline the vocabulary you don't know with a marker.

In the ancient time, there was a city stated on the coast of Turkey, across the sea from Sparta. This city was named Troy. At one time, Troy and the other Greek city-states were allies. But times had changed since Helen, Queen of Sparta, ran away with the Prince of Troy, Paris. The Greek fleets were coming to take their queen back.

Among all the Trojans, the Trojan prince, Hector, was known for battle fighting and leading. The princess of Troy, Cassandra, was known for her power gifted by Apollo. Apollo once offered a deal to Cassandra. If she would give a kiss, he would give her the gift of prophecy so she could see into the future. But when she saw Apollo helping to destroy her beloved city of Troy, she spit in his face. Apollo could not take away his gift. But he could add to it. From that time on, Cassandra could see the future, but no one believed a thing she said.

Among all Greek warriors, Achilles was the most powerful. He was a demigod, the son of Peleus and Thetis. When Achilles was a little baby, his mother tried to protect him from harm by dipping him into river Styx. When he grew up, Achilles heard a prophecy which said that he could make a choice. He could choose to live an ordinary life or a glorious one. That is to live quietly and die in bed without fame or honor, or to be famous in his lifetime and be remembered by people, but to die young. Achilles chose the later one.

However, he was a man with a quick temper. He once dropped out from the battle field after he had a quarrel with Agamemnon. His friend Patroclus came to him and asked him to rejoin the battle because everything went wrong since he quitted. Achilles refused, but lent his armor to his friend. When Patroclus wore the splendid armor of Achilles and fought bravely, Hector, the elder Trojan prince, saw him, and killed Patroclus because he thought the man was Achilles.
