

The "Bass 1200" film transfer enables you to produce a whole number of special effects, double exposures, or captions with speed by recording your subject in time.
The transfer is available for color and sound combinations.

1000

1. A cartridge should not be used for double exposure of the beginning or end of the film as neither the first one or the last one of the last two frames are suitable for recording. If you intend to start with a double exposure, take the cartridge out of the camera first; it is advisable to roll down the footage right up to the cartridge as the counter goes back to zero. NEVER REMOVE THE CARTRIDGE FROM THE CAMERA UNTIL THE END OF THE EXPOSED CARTRIDGE COILS OR THE STOPPED CARTRIDGE APPEARS. (See Figure 1.) This prevents the center of the exposed take-up wheel from gripping up, thus leaving up the film during subsequent exposures.
2. Then remove the cartridge in the camera and flip the power on the exposed cassette up to a maximum of 12 seconds. Make sure that the selector lever is set to 12 for start cartridges and to 18 for end for start cartridges.
3. Now remove the cartridge from the camera. REMOVE CARTRIDGE COIL (a bare STOP) and insert cartridge into the film recorder from above as illustrated in Figure 2. If you do this change in the light, the unexposed frames in the cartridge are exposed and must be rolled out later. This can be prevented by working with the film recorder in the dark.
4. Now the film can be measured. Each turn of the record button in the direction of the arrow outside the film to frames (Figure 3). The record procedure is complete when you receive a slight resistance.
5. During measuring, it is necessary to occasionally shake the recorder gently in the manner demonstrated in Figure 4. If, in spite of this simple action, the film in the cartridge returns to its original rest position, the measuring procedure is incomplete. Remove the cartridge from the recorder; then repeat the cartridge in the camera and superimpose the same. If the Lumby-Orbital mechanism has shifted, then film to the end of the cartridge in normal human information speed the third exposure.
